

Abstract

An auxiliary device for editing documents is described. It consists of a modular key set with documents changed on the computer peripheral. The device is controlled by a single-chip microprocessor. There is no need to edit document without involving the computer.

5